Dear Dr. McDermott and Campus Health Service Staff:

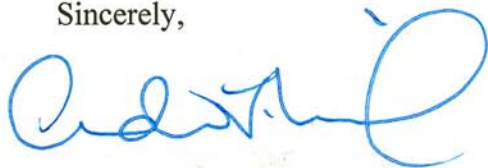

I am pleased to offer my congratulations to all of you on the 90th anniversary of providing quality care for students and staff at The University of Arizona.

As you know, I believe that optimum health addresses the mind, body and spirit. Campus Health has provided decades of this integrative approach by providing a variety of health and wellness services, ranging from conventional medical care, biofeedback, counseling and psychological services, massage therapy, nutrition services, acupuncture, health promotion and preventive services, as well as both customary pharmaceutical preparations and herbal supplements.

Ninety years of commitment to providing excellent and compassionate service to students and staff is impressive. You have undoubtedly helped hundreds of thousands through illness and injuries, while assisting others to heal, eat better, diminish stress, or reduce the risk of disease and injury. It is indeed fortunate that students and staff can find the professionals, resources, guidance, and support they need to enhance their health through Campus Health's many programs.

I wish you continued success as an integral contributor to the health and wellness of the University of Arizona campus community.

Sincerely,

Andrew Weil, MD
